

Module III: Religion in a Global Context
Proposal to Create a New Core Course

Instructions: Use this form to propose a Religion in a Global Context University Core course. Forms for each of the other Core courses can be found on the Core website. Please provide the information requested in each section and insert a provisional syllabus that includes, at minimum, the following information: the learning outcomes, possible texts or types of texts that will be used, types of assignments and their nature/size/length, and a thematic outline describing how the course progresses through the quarter. Submit your proposal materials through the normal process for course review in your department and college/school, using the deadlines set by your college/school curriculum committees. In general, each faculty member who plans on teaching a customized version of a Core class should submit a separate proposal. Identical courses that will be taught by multiple faculty members may be included on a single proposal, but in those cases department chairs should address the issue of faculty participation in Section V.

The questions on this proposal form reflect the specific requirements for this course as explained on the course guidelines document. Please refer to that document for the details (a copy is attached at the end of this form for your convenience).

Section III: Core Requirements

Required Learning Objectives: Each Core course is responsible for helping students achieve the learning objectives assigned to that Core category. Each of the assigned learning objectives for this course is listed below. Please explain how the course is designed to achieve each of these objectives. Your explanations need not be long, but should be complete enough so that the Core Curriculum Committee can understand how well the objectives are addressed in the course. Please note that the course syllabus, required for this proposal, should also address these learning objectives.

1. This course helps students understand different religious traditions, the interplay between religions, and the relationships between religious traditions and their cultural, historical, and social contexts.

2. The study of religious traditions will help students examine their own beliefs.

3. Students will learn to apply scholarly perspectives and methods to understanding religious traditions or to examining important global issues through the study of religion.

4. This course assists students in becoming effective writers, including writers of high quality academic prose.

5. Many, but not all, sections of this course teach students to examine important global issues through the analytical perspectives and methods of theological and religious studies.

6. Through the study of different religious traditions, this course helps students develop cross-cultural understanding and competence.

Essential Pedagogy: Please provide brief explanations of how this course incorporates the essential pedagogy identified in the Core course guidelines document (listed below).

1. Writing assignments should be included in all sections of this course, with instructor feedback on content, writing mechanics, and style.

2. Whenever possible and relevant to the focus of the section, students should have some kind of cross-cultural experience or focused study of other cultural traditions in the context of this course.

Common Learning Objectives: All Core courses share a common responsibility for helping students achieve the objectives listed below (see Common Learning Objectives in the Core for more information). However, it is understood that different courses will emphasize some objectives more than others. Please identify the common learning objectives emphasized in your course by checking the boxes below.

- 1. Where relevant, courses should help students understand how the field and subject matter being studied are related to or reflect the Jesuit intellectual tradition. In particular, Core courses should help students reflect on questions of meaning, spirituality, ethics, values, and justice.
- 2. Students should develop analytic thinking and reasoning skills in all Core courses, although the forms those skills take vary across disciplines.
- 3. Students should come to recognize and appreciate complexity and ambiguity, as well as the limitations of knowledge and imperfections in understanding of the subjects being studied.
- 4. Study in a variety of disciplines will assist students in understanding and valuing the wide range of academic insights and perspectives.
- 5. All courses should help students develop as writers of clear, effective, and elegant prose, including the ability to adapt their writing to different situations and content.
- 6. Class discussions, in all their forms, help students learn to engage in effective and responsible discussion and debate.
- 7. All faculty are encouraged to help students understand how their studies prepare them to meaningfully engage important issues and become responsible global citizens.

Insert any necessary information here. Otherwise, leave blank.

Section IV: Instructor Information

1. Submitting Faculty: Qualified individuals from any department are welcome to submit Core course proposals in all categories. Please briefly describe the academic background and experience that prepares you to teach this course. Note: In most cases, this should be very simple (e.g. a directly relevant terminal degree, teaching experience in similar courses, etc.), but if additional information regarding your academic preparation for this course is necessary, please include that here.

2. Additional Faculty: If your department's plans include faculty members other than the individual listed on this form being scheduled to teach this specific course, please list their names here with very brief explanations of their relevant preparation. Any faculty member teaching this course should have qualifications directly comparable to those of the proposing faculty member. If the versions of the course they will be teaching are expected to vary in any significant way (i.e. not using the same syllabus), each faculty member should submit a separate proposal. As new faculty members join the university and are assigned to this course, their faculty information should be submitted to the Core as soon as possible.

Section V: Other Information

- 1. Short title: To be used in published information and to identify your course in SUOnline. 30 characters maximum.

- 2. Short description: To be published in lists of available Core courses and included in the course description on SUOnline to assist students in selecting courses. Approx. 50-75 words.

- 3. Special Course Requirements: If you checked any of the boxes on page 1 regarding library resources, facility requirements, or other special elements in the course, or if there are other unique features that should be considered in planning and supporting this course (e.g. team teaching, special scheduling needs, etc.), please explain.

- 4. Other Information: Please provide any additional information you feel necessary or helpful for the review of this course.

Thank you for submitting a proposal for this Core course! Please remember that review of this proposal is a multi-step process, proceeding through department, college/school, and Core stages. The University Core will notify both the faculty members and their departments when courses are approved by the Core Curriculum Committee.

Syllabus: A syllabus is a required part of this proposal form. There is space at the end of the form (page 9) for you to paste the syllabus into this document.

Submissions: Please submit this form through your college or school's normal submission process for new course proposals. If you are submitting this form electronically, please save it with a new name that includes the name of the course category as well as your last name (e.g. "Acad Writing - Jones").

The Core guidelines document for this course is included here for your reference. Some questions in this form refer to specific requirements listed in this document.

UCOR 3100 Religion in a Global Context Course Description and Guidelines

Description: Courses that examine religious traditions, spiritual practices and worldviews in a global context. These courses examine diverse religious traditions with respect to sacred texts, doctrines and beliefs, rituals, ethics, and spiritual practices in a global context. Emphases can include the study of a specific religious tradition, comparison and dialogue between religious traditions, and/or applying theological/spiritual perspectives and methods of analysis to global issues. Courses will include explorations of the relationships between religion, society, culture, history, and aesthetics. These courses assist students in applying theological thinking and spiritual reflection to global issues, help them develop understanding of diversity within and between religious traditions, develop facility in dialoging with persons from various religious and spiritual backgrounds, and teach them to reflect on religious traditions outside of one's own. Prerequisite: Module II Theological Explorations.

Notes or Guidelines:

1. Sections of this course may take one of two general approaches: 1) Some sections will focus on the study of religious traditions: studying one or more non-Catholic religious traditions or studying non-US Catholic traditions (including some examination of that tradition's engagement with non-Catholic religious traditions). 2) Other sections will study an important global issue (justice, race, gender, class, environment, peace and violence, etc.) through the lens of spirituality and religious traditions. Important note: Sections that take the first approach will not need to address Learning Objective #5 (see second page). All sections must address Learning Objective #1, although those taking the second, global issue approach may place less emphasis on this objective than those focused on studying specific religious traditions.
2. Some study of inter-religious dialog or comparative religious traditions is necessary as a significant component in these courses, although many sections will focus primarily on one particular tradition.
3. This course is intended to be a rigorous academic experience. While this course engages students in studying and reflecting on faith and spirituality, students seeking further personal growth in any faith tradition should contact appropriate extra-curricular resources (e.g. Campus Ministry).
4. Faculty should be mindful that students have previously taken Theological Explorations, and seek opportunities to build on and connect to what students have learned in that course.

Essential Pedagogy:

1. Writing assignments should be included in all sections of this course, with instructor feedback on content, writing mechanics, and style.
2. Whenever possible and relevant to the focus of the section, students should have some kind of cross-cultural experience or focused study of other cultural traditions in the context of this course.

Learning Objectives: Helping students meet the Core Learning Objectives is a collaborative effort.

1. All Core courses share a common responsibility for helping students achieve some objectives, and faculty should review the common objectives document (see Common Learning Objectives in the Core) and consider how those objectives can be reinforced and developed in this specific course.
2. In addition, each course has specific objectives for which it has special responsibilities. The table on the back of this page describes the ways in which this course has primary responsibility for one or more of the Core Learning Objectives. These objectives must be explicitly addressed in all sections of this course.

Religion in a Global Context: Learning Objectives
Core Learning Objectives	How objectives should be addressed within this course (bullets are the relevant language from the Core Learning Objectives)
Jesuit, Catholic Intellectual Traditions: Through knowledge of Jesuit, Catholic intellectual traditions and understanding of diverse religious traditions, students will reflect on questions of meaning, spirituality, ethics, values, and justice.	1. This course helps students understand different religious traditions, the interplay between religions, and the relationships between religious traditions and their cultural, historical, and social contexts. Students will develop their abilities to analyze diverse religious and spiritual traditions. This course should either directly study non-Catholic religious traditions or study Catholicism with some attention to that tradition in dialogue or encounter with other religious traditions. Together with the Theological Explorations course, this course helps students understand Jesuit, Catholic perspectives within the context of world religions. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Understand Jesuit, Catholic perspectives within the context of world religions • Respect for religious diversity • Ability to appreciate & reflect on religious & spiritual perspectives other than one's own 2. The study of religious traditions will help students examine their own beliefs. Building on Theological Explorations, this course engages students in reflecting on their own beliefs and those of others. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ability to articulate one's own spiritual/religious perspective
Disciplinary Knowledge and Integrative Learning: By studying humanities, social sciences, natural sciences, mathematics, and fine arts, students will learn how different disciplines pursue knowledge. They will learn disciplinary ways of posing questions, gathering and analyzing evidence, developing cogent arguments, and engaging issues related to nature, culture, and society. Students will also learn to integrate knowledge and explore their intellectual passions.	3. Students will learn to apply scholarly perspectives and methods to understanding religious traditions or to examining important global issues through the study of religion. Students will learn to understand and apply appropriate methods in order to interpret sacred texts and/or examine religious traditions, beliefs, rituals, ethics, and spiritual practices in a global context. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The ability to apply disciplinary knowledge and methods to answer questions and solve problems
Communication: Students will be able to communicate effectively in a variety of genres and for different audiences and purposes through writing, speaking, and visual expression.	4. This course assists students in becoming effective writers, including writers of high quality academic prose. While this course is primarily focused on studying religion, helping students improve their writing skills is a goal of all Core courses. Written assignments in this class will focus on genres of writing appropriate to the study of religion.
Global Engagement: Students will examine their roles in local, regional, national, and transnational cultures and communities. Students will be prepared to act, from an informed perspective, on local and global issues that surround and affect them.	5. Many, but not all, sections of this course teach students to examine important global issues through the analytical perspectives and methods of theological and religious studies. See Notes or Guidelines #1: sections focused on understanding religious traditions need not directly address this objective. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Understand key dimensions and issues related to the global community • Appreciate importance of issues of justice, such as social justice, environmental justice, & human rights • Reflect on one's role as a global citizen 6. Through the study of different religious traditions, this course helps students develop cross-cultural understanding and competence. This is not the central goal of this course, but faculty should support the development of these objectives when possible. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Appreciation for cultural diversity and cross cultural communication and engagement • Ability to communicate across cultures
